

An aerial photograph showing the industrial site at the former location of the Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Plant. In the upper left, a large, multi-story concrete building with a gabled roof stands. To its right is a long, low, rectangular industrial building with a flat roof. The ground between and around these buildings is a vast, flat expanse of light-colored earth and sand, heavily littered with debris, including twisted metal, wooden planks, and other fragments. In the background, a dense line of green trees separates the industrial area from a residential neighborhood. A road or path runs along the bottom right edge of the frame. The overall scene depicts the aftermath of a major disaster, with significant structural damage and environmental contamination.

(Foto: Peter Højrup)

Kort over Universitetsparken med eksisterende bygninger. Det skraverede område er Galgebakken, som nu overtages af Universitetet. Området har hidtil isoleret dele af naturvidenskab fra den øvrige park.